

Abstract

A first communication network is used to securely communicate a key that is used for communications over a different network. In one embodiment, a CDMA network is used to securely communicate a key that is used for communications in a data network. The key used in the data network may be used for authentication and/or enciphering or encryption.

005750 03529960
00662530 091500